Day 20

To present the completed podcast website, undergo evaluation, and receive constructive feedback from mentors or peers on the overall project work completed during the 4-week training.

Activities Performed:

- Submitted the final version of the Podcast Website Project for review.

- Participated in a project demonstration session, explaining design choices, structure, and features.

- Underwent project evaluation based on criteria such as functionality, design, responsiveness, and code quality.

- Received feedback and suggestions for further improvements from mentors/trainers.

- Reflected on the entire training journey and documented key learnings and personal progress.

What I Learned:

- Gained confidence in presenting and explaining my project work clearly and professionally.

- Understood areas where I can improve, such as deeper design polish, accessibility considerations, or optimization.

- Learned how valuable feedback is in enhancing the quality of my work.

- Recognized how far I've come in just 4 weeks—from basic structure to a refined, styled, and functional website.

Challenges Faced:

- Nervousness during presentation and Q&A, but overcame it by focusing on what I had learned.

- Addressing a few small issues pointed out during review that I had overlooked (like alt text or color contrast).

Outcome:
Successfully completed the training and delivered a functional podcast website. The feedback session helped reinforce strengths and identify future growth areas. I now have a strong foundation in HTML, CSS, and web design principles, and a complete project to showcase.
